THE THEATRE

Idlehour Theatre

The management of the Idlehour Theatre has had every assurance that the next production made by Douglas Fairbanks, to be shown here Wednesday and Thursday is the most elaborate, costly and stupendous picture he has ever turned out from his California studio.

When "Doug" began his picture, immediately after he had finished his first United Artists release, "His Majesty, the American," he called a conference of all his associates at his studio in Hollywood, Cal., and told them his idea for the next story. Everyone was astonished. "Doug" was absolutely determined that he was going to do something daring and with that he insisted that everything from beginning to end had to be of the most elaborate order.

He went so far as to insist in his story that an entire city, such as may be found throughout the middle western section of the United States, be destroyed in providing one of the spectacular punches in the production. And the destruction was not to be an ordinary destruction. It had to be a flood. The proposition seemed almost impossible but to "Doug" there has never been anything that he can't do when he wants to. And a flood it was. He spared no expense in reproducing this particular community, the smallest detail having been carefully carried out so as to enable the presentation of the most genuine character of realism obtainable.

A location in the foothills of the Cascade Mountains, Northern California, about two square miles in area, furnished the site for the city. A hundred or more carpenters and laborers, under the supervision of Robert Fairbanks, production manager, were utilized in the construction work which covered a period of one month in necessary preparation.

With the use of four massive electric pumps, more than one million gallons of water were drawn from the Sacramento River and stored in a specially constructed reservoir at the highest point of the new city. Numerous scenes were filmed in the city, the final one being the spectacular destruction of the little settlement by the flood. The huge gates of the reservoir were raised and the water, assisted by the steep grade of the mountain, rushed into the foothills carrying everything before it. Dwellings, churches, theatres, bridges and railroad lines were lifted from their foundations and all piled up in masses of debris.

Regent Theatre

The best loved work of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the famous poet, will be shown on the screen, when the big special production, "Evangeline," with Miriam Cooper in the title role, will open at the Regent Theatre, Thursday and Friday, January 29 and 30.

"Evangeline," the poem, achieved instant success not only in America, but all over the world, and within a few years was translated into every civilized tongue.

A comparable success is predicted for the Fox film version as it adheres most faithfully to Longfellow's exquisite dramatic poem, in addition to being the most beautiful of all motion picture productions.

A common declaration has been that such a work as "Evangeline" was not susceptible of successful translation to the screen—that its exquisite beauty as set forth in poetry could not be conveyed to an audience by means of the camera, and that any attempt must prove a dismal failure.
